212 SOUTH MAIN STREET.

A posthumous heir to the $150,- 000,000 estate of the late John Jacob Astor is expected in about two months.

Senator Jonathan Bourne, of Oregon, is to be replaced by a politician named Ben Selling who canvassed the State while Senator Bourne ignored him at Washington and trusted to his friends to renominate him.

In a statement issued by Senator-elect Ollie James, he urges that an instructed delegation from Kentucky be sent to the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore, and calls on advocates of the "masked delegation" idea to uncover their candidates. Mr. James strongly urges the candidacy of Speaker Champ Clark.

The ladies will be interested to know that the Psyche knot is in again and is almost universally becoming. The hair is puffed and waved a little in front and is gathered into a loose and graceful knot on the back of the head. With a band of ribbon and a flower encircling it, the Psyche knot makes a pretty evening coiffure.

A Log On The Track of the fast express means serious trouble ahead if not removed, so does loss of appetite. It means lack of vitality, loss of strength and nerve weakness. If appetite fails, take Electric Bitters quickly to overcome the cause by toning up the stomach and curing the indigestion. Michael Hessheimer of Lincoln, Neb., had been sick over three years, but six bottles of Electric Bitters put him right on his feet again. They have helped thousands. They give pure blood, strong nerves, good digestion.

Only 50 cents at all druggists.

Campanile Restored

A new Campanile to take the place of that which fell ten years ago was dedicated at Venice, Thursday, thousands witnessing the ceremonies.

Saved By His Wife.

She's a wise woman who knows just what to do when her husband's life is in danger, but Mrs. R. J.
Flirt, Braintree, Vt., is of that kind.
"She insisted on my using Dr. King's New Discovery," writes Mr. F. "for a dreadful cough, when I was so weak my friends all thought I had only a short time to live, and it completely cured me." A quick cure for coughs and colds, it's the most safe and reliable medicine for many throat and lung troubles—grippe, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, quincy, tonsillitis, hemorrhages. A trial will convince you. 50 cts. and $1.00. Guaranteed by all druggists.

Why The Mississippi?

The great Mississippi River, which is causing such damage this spring, is certainly true to a name applied to it by the Indians, "an almost endless river spread out."
(U. S. Geological Survey.)

Fortunes In Faces.

There's often much truth in the saying "her face is her fortune," but it's never said where pimples, skin eruptions blotches, or other blemishes disfigure it. Impure blood is back of them all, and shows the need of Dr. King's New Life Pills.
They promote health and beauty.
Try them. 25 cents at all druggists.

Value of Words.

Words are wise men's counters—they do not reckon by them; but they are the money of fools.—Thomas Hobbes.

Wealth and Wisdom.

A man who is worth more than $1,000,000 can get any commonplace remark accepted as an epigram.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Stops
Neuralgia
Pains

Sloan's Liniment has a soothing effect on the nerves. It stops neuralgia and sciatica pains instantly.

Here's Proof

Mrs. C. M. Dowder of Johannesburg, Mich., writes:—"Sloan's Liniment is the best medicine in the world. It has relieved me of Neuralgia. Those pains have all gone and I can truly say your Liniment did stop them."
Mr. Andrew F. Lear of 50 Coy Street, Cumberland, Md., writes:—"I have used Sloan's Liniment for Neuralgia and I certainly do praise it very much."

SLOAN'S
LINIMENT

Governor Beaten.

Gov. Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri, suffered defeat at the hands of Mayor Frederick H. Kriesmann, of St. Louis, for the temporary chairmanship of the Republican State Convention. Hadley is a Roosevelt man.

Saves Leg of Boy.

"It seemed that my 14-year old boy would have to lose his leg, on account of an ugly ulcer, caused by a bad bruise," wrote D. F. Howard, Aurora, N. C. "All remedies and doctors treatment failed till we tried Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and cured him with one box." Cures burns, boils, skin eruptions, piles. 25 cents at all druggists.

Lots for Homes.

Three residence lots on Canton Pike and West 17th Street so cheap you can't afford to miss one for a home. Joh. C. Duffy.

FRENCH IN ALSACE-LORRAINE.

Notices in French must not be exhibited in traders' shops in Alsace-Lorraine, but a transposition of words often meets the requirements.
Notwithstanding these and other ir-some regulations, the people do not become good Germans. At the last meeting of the municipal council at Albreschwiller it was decided to name a new street after General Jordy, who commanded the battalion of volunteers in 1792. It was further decided to name another thoroughfare after Chatrian, the writer, and still another after Pierre Marie, the aviator who met his death in tragic circumstances last May.

MEASURING CORN IN CRIB.

A heaped bushel contains 2,748 cubic inches. To find the number of bushels of corn in a crib it is therefore necessary merely to multiply together the length, width and height in inches and divide the product by 2,748. The number of bushels of shelled corn will be two-thirds of the quotient. If the sides of the crib are slanting, it will be necessary to multiply together one-half the sum of the top and bottom widths, the height and length.—Garden and Farm Almanac.

ANOTHER LINE OF BUSINESS.

"For years and years I wrote poetry," remarked the affluent looking stranger. "I wrote it until I was forced by cold and hunger to take up a commercial line."

"What was that?"

"Writing verses."—Judge.

HIGH COST OF LIVING.

"Gee!" said the man with the shabby coat. "Eggs 60 cents a dozen! What do you think of that?"
"What have you got to kick about?" said the man with the fur-lined overcoat. "Some orchids are $50 apiece!"

WINNING
PANSY

By A. HOWARD GUNTER

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Philip Mandeville Grantwood stood in front of Sam White's drug emporium and glared at the moldy mince pie that the ladies of the South Side Methodist church kept in the window as an indication that there were choice viands to be purchased within. But Philip was not admiring the pie, which had been there so long that it might be said to have accrued historic interest as well as spider webs, and though the pastry was heavy Philip's heart was heavier.

He had been so jubilantly happy when Pansy Borden promised to marry him, and though she had made him promise to keep the engagement a secret he had only admired her the more for that, as Pansy had said that it would distress her mother to know that she was to leave home so soon. It was sweet of Pansy to think of her mother.

However, Philip was human, and when his best friend, Ben Davis, had begun to act in an insufferably patronizing way he could not refrain from giving Ben a hint of the glad news, especially as Ben was a great admirer of Pansy. "I know a secret," he had casually remarked, "that would make you jump if you knew it."

"Humph," retorted Ben, scornfully, "I know one that's worth two of yours."

That was too much for human endurance, and having sworn his friend to secrecy, Philip told him the wonderful tidings. "Pansy Borden's said 'Yes.' It's to be in the fall."

The color left Ben's freckled face, and even his red hair seemed to turn a shade paler. "But, Philip," he protested, "that's my secret!
Pansy's promised to marry me in the fall."

The whole world seemed to Philip to give way, though it was only the cracker box on which he had been sitting. He sprang up and seized Ben by the throat. "It's a lie!" he declared, angrily. "You can joke me about anything else, Ben, but not about Pansy."

When he was excited Ben stuttered. "B-b-b—" he began, and Philip loosened his grip on his throat. There is no use in trying to choke a stuttering friend. "But, Philip, she's wearing my ring." The anguish in Ben's tones was genuine.

Philip sat down and buried his face in his hands. "Forgive me," he said huskily; "she's wearing mine, too."
It was the quick-witted Ben who had whispered presently, "Say, Phil, do you reckon she's wearing any other rings? Every man in this town is in love with Pansy, and even that fresh traveling man, Arthur Dering, was wild about her."

From old Isaacson, who sold diamond rings on the dollar-down-and-50-cents-forever plan, they had learned the ghastly truth. Henry Blaine, Ely Channing and Willie Jo Hall had also purchased rings for Miss Borden. Old Isaacson was quite elated and was planning to enlarge his store.

So it was that Philip Grantwood had not waited long in front of White's Emporium before four other figures stepped out of the darkness and the whole party started gloom-ily for the Borden home. They had decided to go together to Pansy and crush her with the hideousness of her conduct. Knowing the girl's ready wit, they had prepared beforehand a document setting forth in solemn language their righteous indignation, their desire to be freed immediately from their engagements and their emphatic determination that all friendship with such a person should cease. Philip was to learn the speech and act as spokesman for the crowd.

Pansy came in immediately, bringing sunshine and gaiety with her. "I'm so glad to see you," she cried, with the most disarming friendliness. "And all five of you at once! Why, you frightened Polly so that she can't say her prayers."

The five looked at Philip and Philip cleared his throat and began in a rapid mumble. "We have come to-night, Miss Borden, to ask you for an explanation—" He paused, for how could he say these dreadful things to Pansy, with her dear, dis-ordered curls, her merry, brown eyes and her sweet impartial smile? "Oh, Pansy," he blurted out, "how could you do it?"

Pansy glanced from one to the other of her lovers, then the gaiety faded from her face. "Oh," she said softly, "you've told each other."

Pansy did not seem angry, but she was deeply hurt. "Oh," she repeated, "you've told and you promised not to tell." She put her hand into her dress and pulled out a small linen bag, opened it and shook five shining diamond rings into her lap.
Each was tied with a different colored ribbon.

"Keep mine," cried Henry Blaine, savagely, as she held it toward him.
"I don't ever want to see it again." And the other boys echoed, "Keep mine."

"No," said Pansy, sadly, "I could not marry any of you now. I thought that you could be trusted with a secret, but I see that you can't."

This was so manifestly unfair, so preposterous, that it simply took the boys' breath away. Had she been a man they could have answered her; being a woman—and Pansy—they actually began to feel guilty.

One by one they slunk up to the sofa and received back their diamond rings, then Pansy opened a note that had fallen from her dress

"We Have Come Tonight," Miss Borden, "to Ask You for an Explanation."

when she took out the bag. "I suppose," she murmured, "that I'll have to marry Arthur Dering now."

She began reading from the note:
"My Dearest Pansy: I shall be back in Houston Center on the sixteenth of April and shall hope—"

"But no, I won't read you when it's to be, because that is a secret and you might tell."

She stood up, and the boys, aghast at this last piece of information, un-wound their legs from the rungs of their chairs and filed sadly out. All but Philip Grantwood; he remained, for though his pride told him to leave this perfidious woman, his feet refused to move.

"Pansy," he cried, sternly, when they were alone, "aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

Poor little Pansy wilted at once, and large, unmanageable tears began to trickle down her cheeks. She came over to Philip and buried her face in his coat sleeve. "Yes," she sobbed, "I certainly am. But it was so much fun to have all those rings.
And I didn't think anybody'd ever find out."

Philip surrendered shamelessly to the enemy. "Don't cry," he begged, tenderly, and then the same old question, "Pansy, dear, will you marry me?"

From his coat sleeve came a muffled answer. "Yes, Phil, tomorrow if you say so."

"Not much," retorted Philip, blithely, "you don't catch me trusting you until tomorrow. We'll go and wake up the judge and get a license and then we'll go around to Preacher Brown's. And, by the way," he added, jealously, "you're not to answer that Dering man's letter."

"No," came meekly from his coat sleeve, "I won't. I'll let you answer it."

Philip snatched it up from where it lay on the floor and was about to throw it into the fire, when it fell open and its contents were disclosed. "Miss Pansy Borden," it read, "for making one dress, $8.50.
To Miss Jemimah Stacey, modiste."
